IRRIGATING PROJECTS.

Los Angeles Man Says He Understands That Utah's Are All Right.

W. H. Sanders, of Los Angeles, consulting engineer in the government reclamation service, was in town last evening, en route to Montrose, Colo., for consultation with engineers engaged on the Gunnison irrigation project. Mr. Sanders says it is the policy of the government to push all such projects with the greatest dispatch possible. He understands that the Utah projects are in good form and will be carried through without delay. Mr. Sanders called attention to the fact that Utah farmers need to learn the economical use of water, as more is being wasted than actually utilized. Under the new regime farmers will be permitted to take only the water they need, although they might be willing to pay for more. they might be willing to pay for more. The government will protect them against themselves.

FOR SALE-REAL ESTATE.

RELIEVE YOUR FINANCIAL STRESS BY IMPROVING YOUR VACANT LAND.

To lighten your fixed charges and keep your income in line with your expenditures, is your first duty.

If you are open to reason you will agree that vacant land is a constant expense, on account of taxes, special assessments and the interest which accumulates on the investment.

Actually the cost of land doubles every six years, if you figure 7 per cent interest on the purchase price and add the taxes. For instance, land which cost you $100 a rod six years ago, must be sold for $200 a rod to get out even.

There is only one safe and feasible way to carry property and that is to improve it with suitable buildings and use the income to keep your skirts clear of financial embarrassment.

"The Reavis System" of Home Building provides the only safe plan, whereby owners of vacant land can improve it with buildings, without paying any cash down.

A special feature is the partial pay-down.

A special feature is the partial payments agreement whereby any parts or all of the loan can be paid at any time, thus reducing the interest to about 4 per

"The Reavis System" arranges the monthly payments so that income from the improvements pays both interest and the improvements pays both interest and principal.

Another feature, granted at your option, provides that if the borrower dies, the loan is fully satisfied at death—a splendid protection for a man's widow.

Don't read this announcement and then forget the object it teaches—the economic necessity of improving your vacant land—but make up your mind to act at once and investigate the practical and beneficient plan of "The Reavis System" Offices located on the Ground Floor Security Trust Building, 32-34 Main St. "The Z. C. M. I, is Opposite."
